The Vice-Chancellor also called for more of such collaborations be established between the university and industry for the sake of community development.

In addition, during the meeting, the Vice-Chancellor also described future plans of UUM, and he also extended an invitation and welcomed the idea of TM setting up a laboratory at UUM for research purposes in the field of technology.

Meanwhile Mr Rosli, said that TM was ready to help UUM achieve its goals if an agreement could be reached that was not solely about return on investment (ROI).
