'BUDGETING AND PUBLIC EXPENDITURE MANAGEMENT' (8th to 26th August, 2011)

INTRODUCTION

The metamorphosis in the world economic order catalyzed by forces of globalization and liberalization has led to worldwide movement towards a smaller but highly accountable government. Those at the helm of things find themselves face to face with complex governance issues on one hand and rising expectations on the other pitched against where their traditional skills are proving to be inadequate. The governing systems as well as the civil servants who constitute it are fervently in search of speedy updating of skills and knowledge which will enable them not only to comprehend the growing complexities of the new economic order but also to effectively meet the rising expectations. There is an urgent need among the civil servants to graduate beyond the micro prudence of project management to larger issues of fiscal consolidation at the macro level. It is to address this growing need that the National Institute of Financial Management, a premier management academy in India, has devised a three- week capsule for senior and middle level civil servants on 'Budgeting and Public Expenditure Management'. The obvious aim of the course is to expose the participating civil servants to latest concepts and techniques in Budgeting, Public Expenditure Management, Public Auditing and Information Technology. The objective is to help them develop an attitude that compels them to keep abreast of future developments in these areas on the basis of the framework that this course will provide.
