(THE EMINENT MANAGEMENT UNIVERSITY)

UUM ONLINE:

SYNOPSIS:

In general, teachers have several perceptions of their students based on attitudes and achievement in their studies. Their perceptions will cause a fallacy of thinking that affects the future of the student. The submarine model provides an explanation of how teachers need to examine in depth the skills available to their students without prejudice. This model helps teachers to explore the skills their students have and guide them to become human capital that benefits the development of the country. Thus, this knowledge sharing encouraged the teachers to be cautious about students' critical thinking skills level and should not be taken lightly as there are various skills of students that can be improved to make them a skilled workforce in the future.

WORKSHOP:
