INTRODUCTION

The Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (SoTL) emphasizes a concern that teaching should ultimately have a profound and positive impact on learning. SoTL facilitates individuals in designing, implementing, as well as sharing research in teaching and learning. Instructors engaging in SoTL, the work of the classroom becomes a site for inquiry, asking, and answering questions about student learning in ways that can improve one's own classroom and also advance the larger profession of teaching" (Huber & Hutchings,

This international conference on the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (ICSoTL), will focus on the theme "Teaching that Learning Happen." It hopes to bring together experts and practitioners of SoTL across various disciplines to discuss issues related to effective teaching and learning.

OBJECTIVES

- Encourage the sharing of the latest research on teaching and learning.
- Create a space for experts and practitioners from various institutions and communities to share ideas and experiences in teaching and learning.
- Highlight innovative, creative and effective teaching and learning strategies and approaches.
- Raise awareness of student-centered learning practices.
- Strengthen teaching philosophies in accordance with the development of 21st century skills.
- Expand the local and international network of experts in teaching and learning.
